Appomattox County Had 14th State Ranking in '54

Appomattox County fell from a rank of 7th among the counties in Virginia in 1953, to 14th in 1954, as to the number of highway deaths per 100 million vehicle miles of travel. In each year, there was only one highway fatality in the county.

However, with four deaths already in this county for 1955, the prospect that the years end will find Appomattox ranked well down in the lower half of the 96 counties of the Old Dominion.

The rate (deaths per 100 million miles traveled) of Appomattox was 2.8 in 1953 and 2.7 in 1954.

Buckingham County had 7 traffic deaths in 1953 to rank 79th, and 5 in 1954 to rank 55th.

Final official tabulation of Virginia's 1954 traffic fatalities stood at 810—a substantial reduction of the 904 of 1953.

Seven counties: Amelia, Craig, Giles, Highland, Lunenburg, Middlesex and Surry scored deathless years as did the cities of Bristol, Harrisonburg, Suffolk and Waynesboro. For Waynesboro, 1954 was the second consecutive year.

Twenty-nine counties showed death increases while 49 bettered their previous records and 20 saw the same number as in 1953. The largest number of fatalities, 31, occurred in Fairfax, while Nansemond and Norfolk saw 25 each. On the basis of deaths per 100 million miles traveled (death rate), Fluvanna with five killed and a rate of 22.8 had the worst record.

There were 14,198 people injured seriously and 10,152 injured slightly.

Town To Add Well For More Water Supply

The Town of Appomattox is having an additional well drilled, to boost the town's water supply, and supplement the three wells now in use, Town Manager C. J. Hunter announced yesterday that the new well will be drilled by the Moore Well Drilling Company, of Rustburg and that a site for the well has been approved on property secured from E. L. Smith, between Route 460 and the N & W railway line.

Work on the project is expected to get under way in a few days.

Moore was low bidder on proposals submitted by the town.

The need for additional water supply for the town was highlighted last summer when a severe drought lowered the level in the town's two water tanks, and some restrictions on use of water had to be asked of the users.

The town last summer was offered use of the third well now in use, by Herncalls, Cleaners, on property they own near the town's 100,000 storage tank. This aided the community out of the drought emergency, but as the towns continues to grow, it was felt highly expedient that a fourth well be added to the supply.

The water from the new well to the storage tanks will be pumped through an existing pipeline, holding the outlay for the project to a minimum.

Highway Commission Adopts 5-Year Plan for Improvements

A five-year program for the development of Virginia's primary highway system has been adopted by the State Highway Commission.

The program, which was approved by the Commission at a meeting in Richmond April 21, represents a new concept in highway palnning in Virginia.

The first five-year plan probably will not be compelted until next spring, when the Commission makes tentative allocations for the primary system for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1956.

Under the new plan, the Commission not only would make annual allocations, but, in addition, would select tentative projects to be considered for construction during the next five years. Engineers pointed out that the program will have sufficient flexibility to allow for "changes due to unforeseen contingencies." It would involve about 80 per cent of anticipated highway funds during the five year period.

In adopting the program, the Commission took note of the fact that "the current trend in highway development is changing rapidly" and that the public "is becoming extremely highway conscious." The five year planning program represents an effort by the Commission to adopt a plan which would enable it "to prepare and to put underway the best possible type of highway program with the least amount of public inconvenience and friction."

The plan will make it possible for the Commission to say specifically what highway projects it intends to begin during a five-year period. The program will be a continuing one and as allocations are made each year for the primary system, another year of "tentative projects" will be added to the end of the five-year plan.

The Commission also adopted a policy designed to bring before the public plans for projects on the interstate highway system and for by-passes and other extraordinary projects on state highways, where control of access is involved.

Here's the way the plan would work:

1. The local member of the Highway Commission and highway engineers would meet with local officials and citizens and inform them of the location of proposed projects in their area and obtain their reactions and suggestions.

2. Next, proposed lines and alternate locations would be drawn on aerial photographs or maps; right of way, construction and utility costs would be estimated, and a report would be prepared. This report

Blue Mold Appears In Appomattox

Appomattox County farmers are urged to take precautions against Blue Mold damage, Jim Smith, county agent, stated this morning.

Blue Mold has been identified on some tobacco plant beds and will probably be widespread by the week-end.

Blue Mold can be effectively controlled with either a spray or a dust. Spraying is, perhaps, more effective and cheaper, whereas, dustinag is more convenient and easier to use. Ferbam is sold under the trade names of Fermate, Karbam Black Ferrasdow, Nu Leaf, Carbamate, and others.

For spraying use material at rate of 4 pounds per 100 gallons of water (6 level tablespoons per gallon). For the first 3 - 4 applications, use 2 gallons per hundred square yards. As plants become larger, use 6 gallons per 100 yards.

When dusting, use a 10 - 12% material at the rate of one pound per hundred square yards. As plants increase in size use 2 - 3 pounds per application.

Beds should be sprayed or dusted at least 2 times per week until the plants are set in the field. Should Blue Mold occur do not give up, but increase the amount of material and cover plants more thoroughly.
